
Panel e: the neutral-instruction experiment covers seven decision categories; the statement about consequences is the same in both naming conditions and display orders were drawn independently, so rates compare on average.